Read the passage below and then answer questions 26 to 38.

All his Charles Dickens, one of the greatest novelists in the world, would remember a particular day when he was years old, and something his father said. They were out walking together and had stopped, as they often did, to admire a handsome brick house. With its lovely windows and neat lawn, it seemed as grand as a palace.

Then John Dickens told his son that if he worked very hard, someday he might live in that house. The thought took Charles' breath away. The sort of person who would live in that house would be a distinguished man of a taste and education. His father believed that Charles could someday be like that. All he had to do was work hard.

He could not have known on that day how far he would fall and how high he would rise, and that he really would live in that house, and that he would die there.

When Charles looked back on his childhood, these were happy years. They lived in the small house which had a little garden and, across the road, there was a playground for the children. He had a nursemaid, Mary, who comforted his childish sorrows. She also terrified him with blood-curdling horror stories that he adored, though they gave him nightmares. He spent wonderful hours in his tiny room reading from his father's set of novels. He went for days imagining himself to be one of his storybook heroes.

But when Charles was ten, his father was transferred to London, and his happy childhood came to a sudden end. His father had many friends and loved to invite them to the house in the evening for a bowl of steaming porridge and lively conversation. But he had one terrible fault: he spent more money than he made.

In the ten years of Charles' life, the family had lived in the six different houses, each poorer than the one before. And as the months to feed kept growing, the family fell deeper into debt.

When they reached London, Charles was shocked to learn that he would not be sent to school- they couldn't afford it. He stayed at home and made himself useful by cleaning his father's boots and minding the younger siblings. His parents seemed to have forgotten him and all his ambitions.

Two days after his twelfth birthday, Charles was sent to work at factory. From eight in the morning till eight at night, he worked in the room, covering pots of boot polish and pasting on labels. Other children worked there, too, but they were not like his old friends. They were poor boys with rough manners who referred to him scornfully as the "young gentleman."

Worse still, two weeks later his father was arrested for debt and sent to prison, where he had to stay until his debts were paid. His wife and children were allowed to join him there, the whole family living in one room- everyone, that is, except Charles. The factory was too far from the prison for him to get back before the gates were shut at night. So he lived in a cheap boarding house. From Monday morning to Saturday night, he was on his own with "no advice, no counsel, no encouragement, no consolation. No support from anyone"

At night he wandered through the Dark city. His clothes were shabby. He had no friends. Instead of growing into a fine gentleman, he had descended to the streets.

The memory of the time was so painful that, even as grown man. Charles could not walk through those streets without the sting of tears coming to his eyes. And years later when he became a famous writer, his stories were filled with orphaned and abandoned children, debtors prison, factories and the grim and degrading lives of the poor.

Read the passage below and then answer questions 39 to 50

Laziness can be defined as a state of idleness and unwillingness to spend energy. When we feel last, we do not want to do any work. We want to let things stay as they are. Well sometimes we all enjoy being a little lazy such as on a very cold or hot day. However, if this occurs too often, we need to do something about it. This is not to say that we should always be working so as not to be thought as lazy. We need to rest to refresh our bodies and minds after working for long hours. For us to do our work efficient and eventually have a successful life, we must learn how to overcome laziness

How can this monster be overcome? If you feel you have a lot to do, you will probably feel overwhelmed and let laziness overcome you instead of you overcoming laziness. The solution is to break down the huge task. In such cases, the cause of laziness is lack of motivation. This means you simply do not see the reason for carrying out a task. In such cases it is necessary to think about or visualize the importance of performing your task and achieving your goals. Think about the benefit you will reap if you overcome laziness and take action instead thinking about difficulties or obstacles. Your imagination has a great influence on your mind, habits before starting a task or when your mind tells you to abandon what you are doing.

Sometimes laziness leads to procrastination. This is the act of postponing tasks without good reason. If there is something you have to do now and you can actually do it why not just do it and get it over with? An old saying goes, 'Do not put off until tomorrow what you can do today.'

All in all you need to realize that overcoming laziness is achieved through a series of daily actions and activities. Every time you overcome laziness, you get strong, more able to achieve your goal and improve your life.
