- Where the books look like historical accounts the writers pay most attention to the way God speaks through historical events.
- Where the authors occasionally describe the wonders of nature, they do so because they read God's word in it.

- Where the authors describe natural events and calamities, they do so because they see Gods power at work in them.
- When they write wisdom, poetry or prophecy they do so with the thought that these words come from God e.g. God said Word of God came Angel of the lord said.....
- There are stories of dreams, but they believe that God reveals things to people in dreams.
- What people think in their hearts or what they realize are their obligations are written up because writers assume that God speaks in peoples hearts.

- It taught them that their God, the God of their ancestors Abraham, Isaac was greater than all gods worshipped by the Egyptians.
- They also accepted Moses as a prophet, their teacher, their provider.
- It taught them that their God was a provider e.g. provided them with food in the wilderness.

- Helps us to develop as spiritually and morally upright beings / helps in development of good character.
- Makes students to have a vivid awareness of God and how he reveals himself to us through personal experience. This is especially because of the use of life approach in the teaching of C.R.E.

- Sometimes the culprits are released for lack of evidence especially when cases are not immediately reported.
- Sometimes culprits are given such lenient punishment that victims feel it is not worth the embarrassment and publicity.

17. Why most activities in T.A.S centres around the living dead.

- They are part of the living family
- According to the African hierarchy of beings based on principle of seniority living dead are considered parts of their family members hence deserve respect from the junior members of the society.
- They are believed to be nearer to God than the living members of the family therefore act as intermediaries between God and Man.
- They are believed that they protect people from bad omen during rites of passage like initiation, marriage, death etc.
