

ENGLISH TRIAL AND PRACTICE EXAMS 2020
PAPER 2 (TRIAL 1-10)
(Comprehension, Literary appreciation and Grammar)

KCSE TRIAL 1 2020

1. Read the following passage and answer the questions that follow;

On no other continent is the population growing as quickly as the sub-Saharan Africa. The current annual growth rate is around 3%, and the need for food is increasing accordingly. But agricultural production can barely keep pace with this trend. Numerous German education, research and intermediary organizations have long been active in African countries- in some cases for over decades. Together with African partners, they are tackling a wide range of global challenges such as food insecurity. Many projects are being funded by the Federal Ministry of Education and Research (BMBF), which has continually stepped up its engagement in recent years. In June 2014, Federal Research Minister Johanna Wanka presented her ministry's new Africa strategy together with Martial De-paul Ikounga, African union Commissioner for Human Resources, Science and Technology. Germany and the | African continent have been cooperating successfully for as long as thirty years. But cooperation has now been placed on a new footing: research is to be conducted on a partner-like basis and for the benefit of both sides.

One of the BMBF-funded cooperation projects focuses on so-called conservation agriculture or CA for short. The method's most important principle is its rejection of intensive tillage. Ploughing is basically taboo, emphasizes Johannes Schuler of the Leibniz Center of Agricultural Landscape Research (ZALF) in the Brandenburg town of Muchenberg, which is in charge of cooperation within the project. It upsets the ecological balance, he explains- and that leads to increased evaporation. The soil dries out more quickly. Farmers that work according to CA principles also ensure that there is a meaningful rotation of crops and permanent soil cover. This slows weed growth and also reduces moisture loss. The CA method is not entirely new but it's effective: it conserves soils and makes them more fertile, explains Johannes Schuler. ZALF and four other research institutions in Burkina Faso, Kenya, Portugal and Austria are helping to popularize conservation agriculture with a project entitled (INCAA) Innovative Conservation Agriculture Approaches: Food Security and Climate Action through Soil and Water Conservation. Experts from France, Zimbabwe and Malawi are also involved.

If conservation agriculture is to become established in sub-Saharan Africa, existing method, which have already been applied, for example, in North and South America, must be adapted to suit local conditions explains the agronomist. Two challenges here are wide spread water shortages and lack of fertilizers. That is why the project partners have reintroduced a traditional method in Burkina Faso: they put crop plants in previously dug and partly refilled holes. Water collects there and losses through runoff are minimized. A similar approach is now also being used in Zambia, Johannes Schuler reports. There, the holes are smaller, he says, and mainly design for applying fertilizer. "Because the fertilizer is in direct contact with the plants' roots, the yields are much higher." In the case of maize it is even possible to double the yield.

a) What has brought about the increasing need for food in sub-Saharan Africa?

2. Read the following extract and answer the questions that follow.

....."have no problem acquiring more knowledge, skills and specialized experience," said Resian in a defiant tone that had Taiyo squirming with apprehension. "I have no problem at all and I thank Yeiyo for her untiring effort in teaching us. But my question is: do we go through all these lengths to please some bunch of busybodies who do nothing but lounge about in the living rooms, yawning and stretching, waiting for tasty food to land on the table before them? No, I refuse to be taught to solely please male counterparts. They can also cook, and they can, and should also learn to please us females. Period!" Yeiyo-botorr was shushed. Mama Milanoi was dumbfounded and was at a complete loss for words. Taiyo stared at her sister with consternation.

"Resian-siaki!" pleaded Taiyo. 'Please give respect to yeiyo-botorr and stop your uncalled-for tirade."

"But surely, Resian," her mother said, regaining her composure. "Have you no respect for your father who is also male? What has gotten into you, child, lately?" turning to the girl's aunt, she added, "enkaini, Yeiyo-botorr, this child was not like this before we came here. I don't know what has gone wrong."

"Nothing is wrong with me," retorted Resian furiously. And pointing at the living room with her finger, she fiercely charged, "I have no quarrel with my father for whom I have tremendous respect. It is the like of Olarinkoi I am mad at, and all those males who come here ordering to do that or the other for them, simply because they are males. When women visit us, they give us the leeway to respond to their requests. But as we burn our fingers here, Mr. Olarinkoi is dozing off comfortably in our living room and waiting for his lunch and possibly a little angry and impatient with us for delaying it."

Questions

- a) Place the extract within its immediate context. (5mks)
- b) Give the character traits of the following: (6mks)
 - i. Resian
 - ii. Mama Milanoi
- c) identify and explain a theme implied in the extract. 6mks
- d) Who is Olarinkoi? How does he later affect the life of Resian? 4mks
- e) Discuss a stylistic device extensively used in this extract. 4mks

3. Read the following poem and answer the questions on it.

A PREGNANT SCHOOL GIRL

He paid for her seat in the matatu
And walked away;
As he disappeared in the city crowd
All her dreams vanished;

One more passenger squeezed in
And lit a cigarette
She opened the window
And spat cold saliva out
As the smoke intensified
She wanted to vomit:

She remembered the warm nights
When she was her man's pet,

She remembered the promises
The gifts, the parties, the dances
She remembered her classmates at school
Who envied her expensive shoes,
Lipstick, wristwatch, handbag
When she brought to school
After a weekend with him
The future stood against her
Dark like a night without the moon,
And silent like the end of the world;
As the matatu sped away from the city
She began to tremble with fear
Wondering what her parents would say

With all hope gone
She felt like a corpse
Going home to be buried.

KCSE TRIAL 2 2020

Question 1

Comprehension

(20 marks)

Read the following passage and answer the questions that follow.

The 15-year old global strategy to wipe out poverty, fight inequality and tackle climate change effects was ratified by global leaders at the United Nations Sustainable Development summit in New York.

The agenda was to set the world on a path of sustainability through adoption of the new Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), the 17 goals and 169 targets that aim at building on and expanding the eight Millennium Development Goals (MGDs) adopted at a UN summit in 2000.

A myriad of questions have been asked about the SDGs. Did the world need another set of goals? And, for a country like Kenya, what do the new goals pose for us as a country? Specifically, who will logistically and financially, champion their implementation, and where will (scarce) resources come from? How do they tie into our national development goals?

Complex questions indeed, and for some, only educated guesses would provide convincing answers. For others, however, Vision 2030 flagship projects, the second medium-term plan, and the recently launched industrial transformation programme tie the development of priority sectors to the SDGs. This is perhaps due to the fact that, unlike the MDGs, the United Nations conducted what is now termed as the largest consultation programme in its history: a global survey on what the SDGs should include.

Critics of SDGs are quite many. On the one hand countries like Japan and the United Kingdom argue that the goals are too many, but other countries are resisting their reduction. The UN summit and endorsement of the 17 goals, however, implies consensus.

Opponents of MDGs opined lack of good governance in monitoring and evaluating country indicators. Likewise, the largest challenge for SDGs will be tracking and monitoring their development to ensure that all goals are implemented by all stakeholders. The elephant in the room is how implementation of these SDGs will be financed. For Kenya my guess is as good as yours: the country's woes in being able to increase public teachers' salaries couldn't even bring one to scratch the surface on how SDGs will be financed.

Why the United Nations Development Programme has lauded the significant gains that Kenya made in most MDGs, progress towards realizing the targets or eradicating extreme poverty and hunger (MDG 1), achieving environmental sustainability (MDG 7), and improving maternal health in the country.

SGD 3 (ensure healthy lives and promote well-being for all ages) gives Kenya the opportunity to build on existing initiatives under MDG 5 to improve maternal health in the country.

Also, according to the UNDP's MDG acceleration framework and action plan, Kenya failed to achieve environmental sustainability (MDG 7) due to "high proportion of urban populations living in informal settlements, poor land use planning, diminishing forest cover and low water-per-capita" scores. Interestingly, several of the 17 SDGs focus on environmental sustainability.

Meeting most of the SDG targets in the next 15 years will be no mean feat. The lack of set indicators and adequate finances to implement them means policy makers will require innovative strategies to meet these targets.

Coincidentally, the end of SDGs will also be the culmination of Kenya's Vision 2030 economic blueprint. Perhaps for achievement of the SDGs policy paradigms will need emphasis on sustainability and inclusivity as prisms for implementation.

Comprehension Questions

- a) What are the 'myriads of questions' that have been asked about the SDGs (3 marks)
- b) Explain what necessitated the ratification towards the realization of Sustainable Development Summit (3marks)

- c) According to critics, what will impede successful attainment of the SDGs (2 marks)
- d) Cite a case example given in the passage why Kenya will find it even harder to finance the SDGs (1 mark)
- e) What suggestions does the writer seem to propose for the success of these goals in Kenya? (2 marks)
- f) In about 30 words explain why Kenya failed to achieve environmental sustainability. (4 marks)
- g) The end of SDGs will also be culmination of Kenya Vision 2030 economic blueprint.
(Rewrite starting with The culmination) (1 mark)
- h) What is the writer's attitude toward the whole concept of SDGs. (2 marks)
- i) Explain the meaning of each of the following as used in the passage. (2 marks)

1. Sustainability.....

2. Elephant in the room.....

Question 2 (25 marks)

When Minik began to speak, it was to Nabaru the enkabaani that she directed her discourse. Looking at her with charming warm eyes, Minik told her she thought she was her mother's age mate. She would not therefore begrudge her if she found out that, like her own mother, she supported the traditionally favored girl circumcision which was said to have been handed down to the people dating back to the time the Maa people ascended the Kerio Valley. That was said to be in accordance with Maa culture - a culture that she too loved and respected. She said that she even lauded the Maa culture for the tenacity of its fabrics that had enabled it to hold its people together long after others had disintegrated. She however said culture was supposed to be dynamic and it ought to shed off aspects that have outlived their usefulness. She argued that in the past such archaic aspects had been discarded and forgotten.

She gave the example of emuata, a horrible and outdated cultural practice that demanded that young brides, called isianikin, wear heavy copper wire coils around their limbs, legs from ankle to knee, arms from wrists to elbow and from elbow to armpit.

The copper wire coils were so heavy that they impeded the young women's movement. They were also so tight that they constricted their veins and wasted their muscles. Besides, they harboured flies and lice underneath them resulting to incessant itching. Eventually, that injurious tradition amaut, was discarded and the women freed from that harrowing experience that was ironically meant to enhance their beauty. Similarly, she said, emuratare-o-Ntoiye, which referred to the girl child circumcision, should be discarded in the same manner, for its time had passed and it had outlived its usefulness.

"The name of intoiye nemenga/ana, should stop being derogatory," Minik said triumphantly. "Instead emuratare-o-Ntoiye should disappear from the Maa language and should be considered as extinct."

She said so much more that, at the end, Nabaru was convinced that FGM did not add any value to the lives of its young Victims. Instead, she agreed it traumatized them and was hazardous to their health.

And having been an Enkabaani for a long time, she said she could testify to its devastation, having witnessed the way young lives were ruined by the practice. She vowed to join Minik in lobbying against it.

Questions

- a) Using the rest of the book, explain who Nabaru is and how she ended up in Minik's house. (6 marks)
- b) Minik has been described as an enemy of the Maasai. Using the extract, give your reaction. (4 marks)
- c) Discuss a theme used in the extract. (4 marks)
- d) Explain a stylistic device used in the extract. (3 marks)
- e) Describe success that Minik achieves in the course of her speech and its significance. (5 marks)
- f) Give the meanings of the following words as used in the extract. (4 marks)
 - i. dynamic
 - ii. injurious
 - iii. constricted
 - iv. derogatory

Blood iron and trumpets

Blood iron and trumpets

Forward we march

(others fall on the way)

Blood and iron the trumpets

We shall hack kill and cure

Blood iron and trumpets

Singers of the datsun blue

Forward we drive breaking the records

Blood iron and trumpets

Let bullets find their targets and the earth be softened

Blood iron and trumpets

Let the dogs of war rejoice

And carrion birds feed

We are reducing population explosion

Blood iron and trumpets

The uniformed machines are around

Put on your helmet iron and rest
Blood iron and trumpets
Only through the fire can be baptized to mean business
So once again
Blood iron and trumpets
We shall always march along
Blood iron and trumpets
Blood iron and trumpets
Blood alone

KCSE TRIAL 3 2020

1. Read the passage below and then answer the questions that follow

You may think that expecting food to change your life is too much to ask. But have you considered that eating the right food at the right time will increase your energy, help you manage weight and ward off major illness?

Researchers have found that eating a meal with plenty of protein leaves you feeling more satisfied for longer when compared to a meal loaded with low-quality carbohydrates. Your body takes longer to digest protein, leading to a gradual increase in blood sugar. The high-protein breakfast will therefore carry you through the morning and, more importantly, through your tea break. Many high carbohydrate meals are absorbed quickly and send blood sugar on a roller coaster ride, taking your appetite with it depleting your energy.

Many foods contain antioxidants, but fruits and vegetables may be the richest source. Behaving like chemical warriors, antioxidants neutralise molecules known as free radicals before they damage arteries and body cells. This protects you from heart diseases, high blood pressure, cancer and diabetes. You can now see why antioxidant foods should be consumed in generous portions Actually, forget pills-antioxidants work best when consumed in foods. In fact, nutritionists recommend that we eat five portions of fruits and vegetables a day. Its less daunting than it sounds: a portion equals a piece of fruit, three tablespoons of cooked vegetables or a glass of fresh juice. And do you desire to relieve yourself of some baggage? Calcium is the latest weight loss star to appear on the scene. Scientists stumbled on its magic by accident. From a study that measured the blood pressure of obese people, it was discovered that those who took one large tub of yorghut a day in their diet lost an average of eleven pounds of body fat in one year, even though they did not eat less.

A follow-up study found that people on a high-calcium diet lost more weight and fat than did people on low calcium diet-and a gain, both consumed the same number of calories. Researchers believe calcium encourages fat cells to stop "getting fatter". Instead, the cells burn extra fat without you having to go anywhere near a gymnasium.

It probably sounds strange to say that you can eat more in order to lose weight. Obviously, the question you should ask immediately is, “Eat more of what? We are talking about foods rich in fibre. They have what is referred to as low-energy density; that translates to few calories relative to weight. This means that you can down a mountain without fear of calorie overload

Fibre also aids weight loss because its filling. Most high –fibre foods take a lot of chewing, triggering your body’s fullness sensors. Moreover, you absorb the food more slowly so you feel full longer.

Will the wonders of food ever cease? Not if researchers in nutrition keep up their pace. Let them keep the good news flowing-such as the fact that we don’t have to starve ourselves to lose weight and keep diseases at a bay

2. Read the excerpt below and then answer the questions that follow

Yes, that is how Oloisudori defined success, Ole Kaelo thought bitterly. And he and many others define it in the same way.

The archaic adage that exhorted the young and up-coming businessmen to take care of cents and let the shillings take care of themselves was regarded by the likes of Oloisudori to be untenable. Instant riches, just as instant tea or instant coffee were the thing. And the instantaneous bliss brought in an on-the-spot feeling of well-being, felicity and happiness. That was what everyone wanted, Ole Kaelo reasoned, and that was what he himself had always wanted. And that was the reason, like a stinking rotten carcass would draw a torrent of flies to itself, people like him and many others got drawn to the murky business of Oloisudori.

" But now the chickens had come home to roost," Ole Kaelo lamented ruefully. Oloisudori was now demanding his pound of flesh. He recalled the events of that afternoon when Oloisudori came calling. Seeing him in his house unexpectedly, had signaled trouble with his contracts. But Oloisudori had allayed his fears, saying that all was well in that direction. That had restored his peace and calmed his frayed nerves. The success of the shop depended entirely on those contracts. Even the large stocks he held in the go downs were secured on the strength of those contracts. It was therefore gratifying to hear him confirm all was well. What did he want then? He had wondered. But he did not have long to wonder for long, for Oloisudori did not believe in niceties. He had lifted his head, letting a small silence draw out between them, he told him, " There is a small matter that I would like us to discuss."

KCSE TRIAL 4 2020

1. Read the passage below and answer the questions that follow.

(20 marks)

Developing a Strong Team

A leader is a person who can bring people to work together in response to a task or vision. He has the ability to meld people into a cohesive team. He works with them to develop and execute strategies for overcoming challenges.

To build a strong team, the team leader must enable the members to feel like family. He must show love and respect for members.

A good and effective leader is not abusive, overbearing, or overwhelming. Team members must never feel used to meet the personal agenda of the leader. There must be a sense of commitment to each other and to the vision of the organization. Such a team will do anything within its power to help the leader when called upon.

A wise leader will help his team to be healthy – mentally and spiritually. He will not overburden or misuse the team. He will continually work at strengthening the team's morale and building good working relationships.

The strong members of the team should help the weak ones to grow, mature and become strong too.

There are various ways to build a team. They include, firstly letting your followers see that you are firm resolute and committed in the daily performance of your duty. Doing so will gain their respect and trust.

Secondly, demonstrate your compassionate and caring nature. This will aid you in forming successful relationships with your team members. A caring leader creates caring people and when as a leader you are in trouble they will be there for you.

Thirdly, keep hope alive in your people. If hope is extinguished, it creates desperation, which can cause people to make drastic and unwise decisions.

Fourthly, stand with anybody who stands aright-stand with him while he is right, and part with him if he goes wrong and refuses to be corrected.

The fifth thing is when making a decision, understand the facts. Consider various solutions and their consequences to make sure that the decision is consistent with your objectives. Then effectively communicate your judgment.

Finally, allow your members to reach their full potential. A team leader should be a secure person who is not threatened by strong team members. You can also strengthen your team when you encourage your followers to team, release them to excel in their calling, encourage change whenever it is necessary and deal with conflict as creatively as possible.

It has also be found out that when members identify with their leader's spirit they will be willing to accept his leadership with little or no hesitation. They will feel at one with the leader. They will also want to be part of his vision, because they believe in him and in his vision. They will as well work with him toward the achievement of the goals of the organization or ministry.

Question 2.

Suddenly the beam of the vehicle's light brought in to view a small mud-plastered house with a rusty tin roof. Around the house was a thorn fence and beside the house was a small wooden gate that was shut. The vehicle slowed down and stopped in front of the gate. The two men conversed in low tones for a few minutes in the front cabin, then Olarinkoi opened the door and came out. He walked round to the back of the vehicle and shot back the tower bolts that held the tail gate and lowered it.

He pulled out two bags, one of maize flour and the other of sugar, and lifted a couple of large cartons and placed them on the "What are you still doing on the back of the vehicle?" he asked Resian rudely. "Alight quickly, the driver doesn't have the whole night to wait."

The moment she alighted, the pick-up reversed, turned and was driven off. Within a few seconds they were left in pitch darkness and no sound was audible save for their breathing and the gentle rippling sound as the wind rustled dried leaves. The stillness was eerie and frightening.

Olarinkoi removed a torch from his pocket, beamed it on the gate and began walking towards it without walking to Resian. He took a bunch of keys from his pocket, selected one and inserted it into the dangling padlock and opened it. Resian still stood where she had been left in the darkness, feeling sick from hunger and nauseated from the lurching and the rattling of the pick-up. Already a swarm of mosquitoes was gathering around her and a cold wind that was blowing towards her made her shiver uncontrollably. Come on, woman," Olarinkoi growled. "Are you going to stand there until you are dragged away by hyenas?" Good Lord!" Resian gasped in shock. She hoped in God's name that what she was imagining was not what was in Olarinkoi's mind. What had she got herself into! Where was she and was Olarinkoi sincere when he said he was taking her to Emakererei?

She hoped the house before them belonged to another family friend of Olarinkoi and they were going to be there only for the night. In the morning she hoped they would walk to Emakererei's place, which she imagined was close by. But it worried her that rather than rebuking her, Olarinkoi had not looked at her nor spoken to her since they left Nasila.

The Gourd of Friendship

Where is the curiosity we've lost in discovery?
Where is the discovery we've lost in knowledge?
Where is the knowledge we've lost in communication?
Where is the communication we've lost in mass media?
And where is the community we've lost in all these?
Where is the message we've lost in the medium?
It is easy to go to the moon:
There, there are no people.
It is easier to count the stars:
They will not complain.

But the road to your neighbour's heart- who has surveyed it?
The formula to your brother's head-
Who has devised it?
The gourd that doesn't spill friendship –
In whose garden has it ever grown?
You never know despair
Until you've lost hope;
You never know your aspiration
Until you've seen others disillusionment.
Peace resides in the hearts of men
Not in conference tables and delegate signatures
True friendship never dies-
It grows stronger the more it is used.

KCSE TRIAL 5 2020

1. Read the following passage and answer the questions that follow.

At length the air began to grow grey with light, then swift golden arrows came slashing across the snow, and at last the glorious sun peeped up above the lava wall and looked upon – frozen forms and upon Vent Rogel, sitting there among us stone dead. No wonder his back had felt cold, poor fellow. He had died when I heard him sigh, and was now almost frozen stiff. Shocked beyond measure we dragged ourselves from the corpse (strange, the horror we all have of the companionship of a dead body), and left it still sitting there with its arms clasped round its knees. By this time the sunlight was pouring its cold rays (for here they were cold) straight in at the mouth of the cave. Suddenly I heard an exclamation of fear from someone, and turned my head down the cave.

And this is what I saw. Sitting at the end of it, for it was more than twenty feet long, was another form, of which the head rested on the chest and the long arms hung down. I stared at it, and saw that it too was a dead man, and what was more, a white man.

The others saw it too, and the sight proved too much for our shattered nerves, one and all we scrambled out of the cave as fast as our half-frozen limbs would allow. Outside the cave, we halted, feeling rather foolish “I am going back” said Sir Henry. “Why?” asked Good.

“Because it has struck me that – what we saw – may be my brother. This was a new idea, and we re-entered the cave to put it to the proof. After the bright light outside, our eyes, weak as they were with staring at the snow, could not for a while pierce the glooms of the cave. Presently however we grew accustomed to the semi-darkness, and advanced on the dead form, Sir Henry knelt down and peered into its face

“Thank God”, he said, with a sigh of relief, “it is not my brother”. Then I went and looked. The corpse was that of a tall man with aquiline features, grizzled hair, and a long black moustache, the skin was perfectly yellow, and stretched tightly over the bones. Round the neck hung a yellow ivory crucifix. The corpse was frozen perfectly stiff.

Who on earth can it be? Said I. “Can’t guess?”
asked Good. I shook my head. “Why, the old Don Jose da Silvestra, of course who else?”

“Impossible, ‘ I gasped, “He died three hundred years ago,”

“And what is there to prevent his lasting for three hundred years in this atmosphere. I should like to know?” asked Good. “If only the air is cold enough, flesh and blood will keep fresh forever, and Heaven knows it is cold enough here. The sun never gets in here, no animal comes here to tear or destroy and no doubt his slave of whom he speaks on the map took off his clothes and left him. He could not have buried him alone. “Look here he went on, stooping down and picking up a queer-shaped bone scraped at the end into a sharp point, “here is the “claw-bone” that he used to draw the map”. We gazed astonished, for a moment forgetting our own miseries, at this extraordinary and, as it seemed to us, semi miraculous sight.

'Ay' said Sir Henry, and here is where he got his ink from, and he pointed to a small wound on the dead man's left arm.

'Did ever man see such a thing before?'

There was no longer any doubt about the matter, there he sat, the dead man, whose directions, written some ten generations ago, had led us to this spot. There in my own hand was the rude pen with which he had written them, and there round his neck was the crucifix his dying lips had kissed.

2. Read the extract below and then answer the questions that follow.

Although Resian had a lot to complain and grumble about in life in their new environment, Taiyo found it tolerable. For instance, she gladly discovered that mornings in their new home began with a lively chatter of birds in the trees surrounding their house. That gave the home an atmosphere of tranquility and peace.

However, one of the unpleasant aspects that the girls had to live with was the constant violation of their privacy. In Nasila, they soon discovered, the home belonged to all the clan members. It was not an unusual thing to get up in the morning to find the living room full of men and women who came early, not for any tangible business, but simply to share a sumptuous breakfast with their kith and kin. Taiyo and Resian were soon to get used to hearing an urgent knock at the door very early in the morning.

On opening, they would invariably be met by a grinning group of men or women who would unashamedly ask them what they were doing in bed that late in the morning. They would proceed to take seats in the living room and order them to serve them breakfast. When they got used to what at first, they considered negative aspects of the Nasila culture, Taiyo and Resian adjusted accordingly and soon they began to live harmoniously with the people. Their father was out of the homestead most of the time working at the shop and organizing other business matters. His absence meant the absence of his irksome and corrosive remarks that always heightened tension in the house. In his absence, the house was a continuous joy with comfort and conveniences, and the girls found it pleasurable to keep it clean and well-arranged.

THE BREWING NIGHT

It was that memorable night when I heard it

Yes, I heard it all
That night sleep deserted me,
Mocked at me and tantalized me,
So I lay awake, sharp in all my senses.
It was long past midnight:
Time dragged on, the clock chime;
The dog wouldn't bark, nor the baby cry;
It was a moonless and windless night;
The whole universe seemed to stagnate
In dark, dreary, dead slumber.
What was amiss? I knew not.

The dead quietness and solitude
Seemed to be eternal, but
Waves of babbling and muttering
Began to trickle through the streets;
A distant roaring of heavy trucks filled the air,
Hurried footsteps eroded through the street.
What was a miss? I knew not.

I pulled my curtain
And there I saw it all
Heavy boots thick uniforms and solid helmets
Dimly discernible under the pale street lamp
The atmosphere stood stiff and solid with Brawny- faced and clenched -teeth determination

The night had pulsed with passion high and wild;
The streets were stained with new portraits framed;
The wheel changed hands and new plans were filed.
The morning saw the country strangely dresses
And everyone attended the rally.
To hear the eloquence from a strange face,
And everyone quietly nodded and said, 'yes'

KCSE TRIAL 6 2020

1. Read the passage below and then answer the questions that follow.

We are moving inexorably into the age of automation. Our aim is not to devise a mechanism which can perform a thousand different actions of any individual man, but, on the contrary, one which could, by a single action, replace a thousand men.

Industrial automation has moved along three lines. First, there is conveyor belt system of continuous production whereby separate operations are linked into single sequences. The goods produced by this well-established method are untouched by the worker, and the machine replaces both skilled and semi-skilled.

Secondly, there is automation with feedback control of the product. Here mechanisms are built into the system which can compare the output with a norm, that is, the actual product with what it supposed to be, and then correct any shortcomings. The entire cycle of operations dispenses with human control except in so far as monitors are concerned. One or two examples of this type of automation will illustrate its immune possibilities. There is a factory in the USA which makes 1,000 million electric lights bulbs a year, and the factory employs three hundred people. If the pre-automation were to be employed, the labour force required would leap to 25000. A motor manufacturing company with 45000 spare parts assembles their entire supply entirely by computer. Computers can be entrusted with most of the supervision of industrial installations, such as chemical plants or oil refineries.

Thirdly, there is computer automation, for banks, accounting departments, insurance companies and the like. Here the essentials features are recording, storing and retrieval of information.

The principal merit of modern computing machines is the achievement of their vastly greater speed of operation in comparison with unaided human effort; a task which otherwise might take years, if attempted at all, now takes days or hours.

One of the urgent problems of industrial societies rapidly introducing automation is how to fill the time that will be made free by the machines which will take over the risks of the workers. The question is not simply of filling empty time but also of utilising the surplus human energy that will be released. We are already seeing straws in wind: destructive outbursts on the part of the youth whose work no longer demands muscular strength. While automation will undoubtedly do away with a large number of tedious jobs, are we sure that it will not put others which are equally tedious in their place? An enormous amount of monitoring will be required. A man in an automated plant may have to sit for hours on end watching dials and taking decisive action when some signals inform him that all is not well. What meaning will his occupation bear for the worker? How will he devote his free time after a four or five hour stint of labour? Moreover, what, indeed, will be the significance of his leisure to him? If the industry of the future could be purged of its monotony and meaninglessness, man would then be better equipped to use his leisure time constructively.

8. Rewrite the sentence below using a phrasal verb instead of the underlined word. (1 mark)

'The entire cycle of operations dispenses with human control expect in so far as monitors are concerned.'

2. Read the excerpt below and answer the questions that follow.

However, the notion that he was about to hand over his own daughter to a gangster continued to gnaw at the conscience of Ole Kaelo relentlessly. He felt guilty, especially when he recalled the atrocities that were known to have been committed by Oloisudori over the years. But another voice told him quietly that he was being foolish and unreasonable to question his own conscience over the matter of Oloisudori, for he was just one among many who were enjoying the fruits of their labour. And it was hardly anybody's business to know how honest that labour was. After all, the small voice reassured him tauntingly, those who committed bigger crimes such as Goldenberg and Anglo-leasing, were still enjoying the 'fruits of their labour.' Had they not invested the yields of their ill-gotten money in housing estates, in shares, in import and exports in tourism, in transport and in other trades, just as Oloisudori had done?

When he went to bed later that evening, he remained awake for many hours pondering over those disturbing thoughts that went through his mind fleetingly, like water that churned violently in a turbulent sea. He thought of Oloisudori's impending visit and his intended marriage to Resian. He knew the success or failure of the event would determine the fate of his business. Even his continued ownership of that house where he and his family lived, depended on the outcomes of that event. Should Oloisudori fail to get Resian and recall the loan he had extended to him to buy that house, he was done. And knowing Oloisudori, he could very easily draw the rug from beneath his feet, leaving him vulnerable to all kinds of vagaries. And the thoughts gave him anxious moments.

At dawn when sleep overtook him, Ole Kaelo had a pleasant dream. Resian had consented to Oloisudori's proposal. After Oloisudori reported that to him, he was greatly pleased and relieved. His wife was rapturous. Although they were astonished at the turn of events, they were relieved to know that they would not have to live with the guilt of having forced their daughter to get married. What a wise child his once hardheaded daughter had turned to be after all! And how devious! After all those years of sullenness, awkwardness and tactlessness, she had finally brought relief to their life and ushered in a period of peace and tranquility. But then, it was just that. A dream!

KCSE TRIAL 7 2020

Read the following passage and answer the questions that follow

Problem drinkers and alcoholics pay severe penalties for their drinking. It has been estimated that alcoholics are likely to die ten to twelve years sooner before the age of fifty which is one reason

There are so far elderly alcoholic

The mortality rate (that is the number of persons per 100,000 who die each year) among alcoholics is more than two and a half times higher than that of the general population.

Alcoholics often die under violent circumstances, serious accidents, homicide and suicide are not uncommon. This together with the physical deterioration accompanying alcoholism, helps explain

The limit on life expectancy. No one really knows how many deaths are directly attributed to drinking and all such statistics are estimates. One reason for our limited knowledge is that many physicians do not report alcoholism as the main cause of death out of concern for the feelings of the family of the deceased.

Research on physiological effects of alcoholism has increased in the last four years. Heavy drinking is known to be associated with various types of cancer, particularly among persons who also use tobacco. Alcohol abuse also increases the probability of hypertension, stroke and coronary heart disease.

Alcoholics frequently suffer illness and death from cirrhosis of the liver, a disease in which the liver becomes fatty, scarred and incapable of functioning normally. In large urban areas, cirrhosis is the fourth most common cause of death among men aged twenty five to forty five

Alcohol affects the brain, often permanently damaging the mental functioning of alcoholics, Drinking may reduce the number of living cells in the brain, since brain cells do not grow back, alcoholics may suffer from organic psychosis (a mental illness traceable to brain damage) loss of memory and poor physical and mental co-ordination. One out of four persons who are admitted to mental hospital are diagnosed as alcoholics and 40 percent of all admissions are alcohol related. Many of the alcoholic inmates are not likely to recover.

The unborn children of female alcoholics are subject to harm from drinking in what is called foetal alcohol syndrome. Because alcohol tends to be a substitute for a balanced diet, alcoholics are often malnourished. Consequently the infants of alcoholic women are likely to be less healthy and less well

Developed than other babies moreover, when a pregnant woman drinks so in effect, does her foetus. The new born children of alcoholic women may die shortly after birth unless they are medically treated from the shock to their system for suddenly being cut off from alcohol, Furthermore, the impact of alcohol on the woman and her foetus is a major cause of death among the new borns. The effects of foetal alcohol syndrome on the children of female alcoholics are usually chronic and may be permanently disabling

Clearly, it is not too much of an exaggeration to say that alcohol is a highly dangerous drug.

They were silent as they climbed the hill on their way back from Nasila to draw water. The water containers that they carried on their backs were now heavy. The straps that supported the containers pressed down their heads with a painful exhaustion.

As they walked, each one of them allowed her mind to fleetingly roam the fanciful land of wishful thinking. Resian thought how wonderful it would be, had she had a chance to enroll at the Egerton University and after graduation had a chance to work with her role model, Minikene Nkoitoi, the Emakererei at the sheep ranch that she managed. She imagined herself already there driving a large flock of sheep. And when she thought of sheep, her mind flew back to fifteen years or so earlier and reminisced the first time she saw a sheep. It was a childhood memory, a memorable picture from the swirling scene around her which had been captured and preserved by her mind when she and Taiyo accompanied their father to the Nakuru Agricultural show. She could still see in her mind a group of big, docile tawny woolly animals that stood panting drowsily in a green pasture, with the sun beaming down brightly from a clear blue sky. She had then admired the white long overcoats that the handlers wore.

Taiyo also thought of Emakererei. She would ask Joseph Parmuat, to assist her compose a song in her praise. She had already put words to a tune she had composed to ridicule the three women who she thought collaborated with men to oppress the women folk. They were Nasila's three blind mice who, she thought, did not seem to know that the world was changing. Those were the enkasakutoni who threatened to curse intoiyenemengalana and ensured they did not get husbands nor children; the midwife Enkaitoyoni who threatened to spy on the young women as they gave birth to ensure that any who was among intoiye-nemengelana had her status altered there and then; and the dreaded Enkamuratani, who will never tire of wielding her olmurunya menacingly.

"NATURALLY"

I fear the workers. They writhe in bristling grass
And wormy mud out with dawn, back with dusk
Depart with seed and return with fat-bursting fruits
And I ate the fruit

And still they toil at boiling point
In head-splitting noise and threatening
They suck their energy from slimy cassava
And age-rusty water taps: till they make a Benz

And I ride in the Benz Festooned with Stripped rags and python copper coiling monsters
While the workers clap their blistered hands
And I overrun their kids
They build their hives: often out
Of broken bones of fallen bones
And I drove in them-"state house"
Then "collegize" them officialize them
And I....I whore their daughters
Raised in litter-rotting shovels
And desiring a quick quick high high life life
To break the bond

And I tell the workers to unite
Knowing well that they can't see, hear or understand
What with secret and grim sealing their ears
And eyes already blasted with welding sparks
And are speaking a colourless tongue

But one day a rainstorm shall flood
The litter rotten hovels and

COMPREHENSION

Read the passage below and answer the questions that follow

Even though tattoos are sometimes associated with rebellion, they have long standing history among community. Tahitians, for instances used tattoos as a permanent way of preserving their culture and to show social ranking. Early Christians, on the other hand, often had the sign of a cross tattooed on their bodies, particularly their faces and arms, representing a permanent mark of the believer's faith.

The word 'tattoo' is derived from a Tahitian word tatau that means to mark. Tatau has been suggested to be the onomatopoeic sound tap, tap made by the tapping of a tattoo instrument as it works on skin while 'au' is associated with the cry of pain a person gives when being tattooed.

The first ever tattoo to be found on a human being was found on a mummified iceman in 3,300BC with 58 tattoos on his body, which contained lines and dots. This is nothing, however, compared to Scottish Tom Leopard, recorded as the world's most tattooed person, with 99.9 percent of his body covered in leopard, skin design. Guinness world records record that the only part of his body that remained is the skin between his toes and inside of his ears.

When receiving a tattoo, the skin is pierced between 50 to 3,000 times per minute by a needle in the tattoo machine. Most tattoo machines consist of four parts: the needle, the tube that holds the ink, an electric motor, and a foot pedal that controls the movement; almost similar to how a sewing machine works.

Sterilization and disposable materials are crucial to tattooing because tattoos are created by thousands of puncture marks to the skin, each of which could be infected. The autoclave is a safe popular way to sterilize any tattoo equipment that is not disposable. A combination of heat, steam and pressure kills all bacterial and organisms to prevent infection.

In the 18th and 19th centuries, tattoos were dangerous to have. European 'head hunters' caused a terror by collecting tattooed Maori heads. As the odd sport became popular, more Maoris were murdered to meet the demand. In the time, slaves began being tattooed so that their heads could be cut off and sold. Luckily, however, Christian missionaries in the Cook Island condemned the practice of tattooing quoting the Bible "....do not cut your bodies for the dead or put marks on yourself....." They tried to stamp out the custom going as far as trying to remove tattoos by rubbing the skin with sandstone in a practice was known as 'holy stoning'. This was the primitive forerunner to modern tattoo removal known as dermabrasion, where the skin is 'sanded' to remove layers, dermabrasion has now largely given way to laser surgery as a popular means of tattoo removal.

While tattoos bring colour to humanity, research has shown that unclean tattooing practices can transmit diseases such as hepatitis B. Some pigments used in tattoos contain metals that can cause pain during a Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI) test, or even affect the resulting MRI image. Because of the possible negative effects tattoos pose to humans, those keen on getting one have to be very careful before they get one. That said, it is important to note that presently, many tattoo artists earn a good living out of the art.

2. Read the extract below and answer the questions that follow.

"No Joseph," she said in an infantile whimper. "I can't bear that we can't express the love that we have for one another because of some primitive culture. If by loving you, I offend the sensibilities of Nasila then let me offend and face the consequences of doing so!"

"I also love you very much," Joseph Parmuat responded finally. "I loved you the moment I saw you during your father's homecoming ceremony. But then the clan matter came to separate us. It is true we have no blood relation. But Nasila culture dictates who are related and who are not. We are slotted among those who cannot marry."

"No, it can't be, I cannot accept its verdict," she said petulantly her words agonised. "No way, never!" She stopped, confused and angry with herself at her inarticulate outburst. She took several long steadying breaths and then said, "I cannot accept that a culture that does not feed, clothe or house me comes to control my life. Our lives belong to us, Joseph. The destiny of our lives is in our own hands. We should guard it jealously." At last they drew a little apart. His eyes were open, honest and steady upon her face.

The in mates
Huddled together
Cold biting their bones,
Teeth chattering from the chill,
The air oppressive,
The smell offensive
They sit and they reflect

The room self-contained,
At the corner the 'gents' invites
With the nice fragrance of ammonia,
And fresh human dung,
The fresh inmates sit thoughtfully.

Vermin perform a guard of honour,
Saluting him with a bite here,
And a bite there,
'Welcome to the world, they seem to say.

The steel lock of the door,
The walls insurmountable
And the one torching tortorous bulb
Stare vacantly at him
Slowly he reflects about the consignment
That gave birth to his confinement
Locked in for conduct refinement
The reason they put him in the prison.

The clock ticks

But too slowly
Five years will be a long time
Doomed in the dungeon
In this hell of a cell

The recent claim by scientists at Egerton University that the water table in the South Rift is dropping is alarming. The researchers have noted with great concern that several boreholes in the region have dried up and water volume in several rivers has rapidly reduced as a result of clearing of trees in the Mau forest. This significantly affects Lake Nakuru as its shoreline has noticeably been receding over time. We are being told this at a time when the Ministry of Natural Resources has already laid down plans to clear gazetted forests saying it to settle landless people. We cannot allow this to happen. In the past, we have watched influential people plunder Karura, Aberdares and Mt. Kenya forests. Marmanet forest in Laikipia is no more after several farmers were allocated the public land. We cannot afford to interfere with the water catchment areas of the great rivers of this country because they are our lifeline. Not so long ago, this country suffered crippling power rationing regime for more than six months, seriously hampering economic growth. Industries ground to a halt, laying off a number of employees; complicating an already worse unemployment crisis. This should have woken us up from the deep slumber that "all is well."

Ours is a tale of unfettered impunity. Throughout the country, we read of owners of large flower farmers who have diverted the river course into their farms to irrigate their crops, denying those living downstream a source of water. Others are busy clearing wetlands, seriously interfering with nature's ecological balance. We hear of industries shamelessly emptying their waste into rivers. Apart from that, influential transporters ferry truckloads of charcoal and the precious sandalwood under the noses of the police. More often than not, apart from empty rhetoric, we never get to hear that those responsible have been punished.

When the government kicked off the drive to reclaim the Mau forest, there was a flurry of activities from all and sundry. All came together in a massive tree planting exercise. However, the politicization of the compensation claims put forward by large estate owners with the Mau Complex, brought things to a halt. The enthusiasm has since died and no one knows when the matter will be brought to a conclusion.

We depend too much on our rivers to allow any selfish individual to interfere with their watershed. Needless to say, our complacent attitude towards environmental issues has made environmental problems uncontrollable. It is the high time we came together and took care of our environment.

The government through National Environment Management Authority (NEMA) , NGO's and environmental lobby groups should step up efforts to sensitise people of all walks of life on the need to conserve our natural heritage for the future generations. This should be coupled with replanting of trees on all deforested government land and intensified practice in agro-forestry. The ban on cultivation along river banks and indiscriminate felling of trees for charcoal burning must be enforced.

Apart from that, steps should be put in place towards revocation of all irregular allocation of government forests to individuals. Government officers suspected of abetting land grabbing must face the full force of the law. Industries that dispose off toxic or untreated waste into the environment should also be dealt with firmly.

It's time we took a step towards safeguarding our environment. There is need to develop a sense of collective responsibility. Considering the fact that the United States rejected the Kyoto Protocol of 1997, we should be even more vigilant and jealously safeguard what nature has provided. It's our environment, our country, our heritage. We need it to pass it on to our descendants.

"Yes, they are creators of the labyrinth that the women continue to meander around," she said philosophically.

"Even if I am reluctantly convinced that it was women and not men who initiated the obnoxious ritual who provoked the women to do so? The Ilarinkon who were purported to have pushed women into mutilating their sexuality were men. And the ancient Ilarinkon were no different from today's Ilarinkon. Ellie ancient Ilarinkon were sadists and despotic. Today's Ilarinkon are worse. In addition to being despotic, they are oppressive tyrants; and one of their ways of oppressing us is to demand that F.G.M be perpetuated against us forever!"

A loud knock at the door disrupted their conversation. Before they could respond, there was another knock. Only this time, short urgent raps made in insistent quick succession followed.

"See who it is," her mother told her, happy to get rid of her. She rued the moment she introduced that explosive subject.

Although she had got used to people knocking at any time, that particular knock nearly angered Resian. Why should anybody butt in when she and her mother were carrying out a fruitful discussion? It was rare for her mother to open up to that extent and she would have wished to bring up other issues that required such frankness. Muttering under her breath, she quickly walked from the kitchen through the living room to the outer hall and opened the front door,

I AM TIRED OF TALKING IN METAPHORS

I will talk plainly
Because I am moved to abandon riddles
I will tell you of how
We held our heads in our hands
Because the owl hooted all night
And the dogs howled as if mourning
We awaited the bad news
We received it:
Our mother blinded in one eye
Crippled in the right leg
Because she did not vote
For her husband's candidate

I will remind you
Of when the peeled plantains
Stood upright in the cooking pot:
We slaughtered a cock,
Anticipating an important visitor
We got her:
Our daughter – pieces of flesh in a sack
Our present from her husband.

No! I will not use metaphors
I will just talk to you:
I do not fight to take your place
Or to constantly wave my fist in your face
I refuse to argue about
Your "manly pact"
With my father
You're buying me for a bag of potatoes
And pepper
All I want
Is for you to stop denying me
My presence needs no metaphors

I am here
Just as you are

I am not a machine
To dismantle whenever you whim
I demand my human dignity

COMPREHENSION

(20 marks)

Read the passage below and then answer the questions that follow.

Gender is probably the most important social issue in the world today. It affects and influences every aspect of our lives: politics, economics, religion and leisure. People in the 21st Century strongly believed that every project must get the gender dimension right in order to succeed. But what is gender?

Basically, gender is the expectation that people should do or not do certain things according to their sex. Every normal human being is either female or male. This is sex and it is a biological fact. Indeed, sex is the most conspicuous difference between human beings. The moment we look at a person, we can tell whether that person is a man or a woman, a boy or a girl. The question is if society should use this biological difference to tell people what they should or should not do.

Yet, since time immemorial, this is what human communities all over the world have done. Some African societies bring up their boys to believe that men must be fighters, take whatever they want – by force if necessary and never cry. If anyone asks why they should or should not do this and that, the ready answer is always: you are a man, and that's what men are supposed to do. Girls are told to be gentle and quiet, to obey men, not to climb trees and not to eat certain kinds of food. A girl who asks why she should not climb trees or speak loudly in public is told, you are a woman, and women don't do that. In other words, society is always telling us what we can do and what we cannot do just because we are men or women.

In most cases, there is no physical or logical reason for a man or a woman to do or not do certain things. Any girl can climb a tree as smartly as any boy. If a boy wants to go into the kitchen and cook, there is no reason why he should not do so. Indeed, some of the best cooks in the world, called 'chefs' are men. Yet in some societies, it is a taboo for a man or boy to enter the kitchen. Similarly, some societies do not allow their women to build houses, even work at building sites, whereas in other societies it is indeed the woman's role to build houses. Gender is thus society's assigning of roles to people according to their being male or female.

On the face of it, there is nothing wrong with sharing roles – indeed, there are many cases where it is logical to expect that certain people should do or avoid some activities. For example, it would not be safe for a woman in advance stages of pregnancy to go hunting wild animals or grazing livestock many miles away from home. However, this should not be taken as a blanket excuse to declare that all women must not hunt wild animals. The problem is even worse when some people use gender roles to exploit or oppress other people. Men for example, have for a long time invoked gender roles to force women to do certain things and to prevent them from doing things the women may want to do.

This oppressive practice may be called gender imposition, and it may be seen in all aspects of society.

In social relations, boys and girls are segregated from the earliest years of life. Members of each sex are strictly drilled into what 'feminine' or 'masculine' in behaviour, speech, dress and every activity. Boys and girls are told what work they should or should not do, what places they can or cannot go to. What games to play and even what foods to eat or not to eat, just because they are boys or girls. By the time a person is in his or her teens, he or she has learnt – from both example and direct teaching by older members of society – what exactly is expected of him or her as a man or a woman. These gendered roles often suggest that men should lead and command in everything, be 'tough' – meaning hard and even cruel – and 'strong', which often means aggressive and violent. The women on the other hand, are required to be soft and kind, submissive and unquestioningly obedient to men. Even in public affairs, such as politics or religion, the gendering of roles leads to some curious situations. In some places of worship for example, men and women are strictly separated. Several denominations do not permit women to preach in public or to be ordained as priests or pastors. Politics is widely regarded as a man's field. Some societies insist that a woman cannot be a leader, like President or Army commander. The nagging question, which many women and enlightened men are asking today is: Why not?

This is the challenge to the conventional gendering of roles. Is there any logical reason why a man should not change the nappies of his child, or go into the kitchen and cook? Why can a talented woman not become a top soccer or rugby player, or a bishop or a top business executive? Is it fair to prevent people from eating such nutritious foods as chicken and eggs simply because they are women? Should children be denied the right to inherit their parents' property on the grounds of sex? Is it not pathetic seeing men inflict beastly violence on their wives and children, or one another simply because men are expected to be 'tough'?

To avoid such absurdities, advocates of gender equity demand that sex should not be the main consideration in dealing with people. Assigning roles to people on the grounds of biological differences is a form of evil discrimination, like racism. A more sensible way of dealing with men and women is to take them strictly on the basis of their individual abilities. A human being is a human being, whether man or woman and each should be given every opportunity to realize his or her full human potential. An enlightened approach to gender equity is suggested by the old English saying "What's good for the goose is good for the gander".

2. Read the excerpt below and answer the questions that follow.

" Oh God of all creation! Resian cried out bitterly and audibly as soon as the cruel ugly old woman left her, " What unending woes these are! " What have I done to the gods to deserve this kind of punishment

Then she recalled the teaching of the Bible, and especially where it narrated the woes of those who went through similar or even worse tribulations, but triumphed at the end. She particularly remembered the wailing lamentations of Job and his railing against injustice, and she thought her problems were nothing compared to those he had suffered.

He triumphed because he was stoic, focused and was able to persevere. Olarinkoi and his demonic mother may physically take her to Tanzania, Olarinkoi may physically take her as his wife, they may even physically Circumcise her, but mentally she was going to resist. She was going to refuse to be subdued. Where she could, she was going to physically resist. She resolved to remain focused and she prayed for strength and endurance to be able to bear all those misfortunes.

She had wondered where Olarinkoi was, but she had now learnt from his mother that he was some place planning more evil. She had also learnt that Oloisudori, the monster, was looking for her. She now wondered who among them was a lesser devil. She did not know what to think about her father. He was like the proverbial pig that was fried using its own lard. She thought he was suffering double tragedy: the loss of his daughter and the loss of his shop and home if they were financed by Oloisudori.

3. Read the poem below and answer the questions that follow.

I refused to take your brotherly hand

Your nails are black with dirt, brother
And your palms are clammy with sweat
I refuse to take the hand you extend in help
I shall not join hands with you brother
For unclean hands make me uneasy
For filthy fingernails rob me of my pride.

You argue, gesticulating with your once
Impeccably clean and beautiful hands
That before long it shall not matter
For 'everybody' is delving and digging
And all shall have hands dripping with dirt.

That nobody shall know clean hands look like
And there shall be comfort in the dirty crowd
And enough to eat, for there are good yields
When the stinking manure is well dug in
With strong and bold hands in time

Are you going blind brother?
I ask how many have the sludge
Or the strong and bold hands like yours
With which to dig and delve?
Brother the hands of many are too weak with hunger
And for many the sludge is out of reach
And yet for others the stink is too nauseating!
But all have eyes and hunger fills them with anger
As they watch your fingernails fill with dirt!

I have seen hungry envious eyes
Watching silently through your chain-link fence
I have seen eyes in deep sunken sockets
Burning with anger intently watching you
I have seen parched mouths water with saliva
And heard the rumbling of hollow empty stomachs
As they watched you feed the dog with meat
From the heavy yields of city sludge

Have you entirely forgotten Brother
The fragrance and comfort of clean hands?
The confidence, the peace you have when you know
You'll leave no ugly smudge upon sheet?
Don't you remember the repulsion you had
When you shook hands with fat dirty men
With their dirty clammy palms?
